

STOCK MARKET IS STILL DULL

Rumors of Impending Financial Trouble at St. Louis.

PAST WEEK IN WALL STREET

GOOD RESISTANCE TO DOWN-

As pointed out by Mr. Schiff as likely to occur, the prolonged liquidation has produced some accumulation of bankproduced some accumulation of banking reserves, with resulting effect on the money rate. Another effect of the process of contraction has been to withdraw some of the expected demands on the money market for which resources had been conserved. This is true of the dreaded heavy demands from railroad corporations for betterment work already under way. Borrowing of this kind at high interest rates was a feature of last fall's money market. That it has not developed this fall is corroborative of the evidence rates was a feature of last tall is money market. That it has not developed this fall is corroborative of the evidence from other sources that such works have been greatly curtailed in all directions. With the prospect of lower rates for money, the rate of return on many railroad bonds at present prices has made them attractive for investment. In the case of shares of stock, it cannot be said that the present situation has extended beyond a marked cessation of the recent persistent pressure to liquidate. There is no longer manifest the constant selling on all news that might be regarded as favorable which gave evidence for so long of the urgent needs of large holders of securities for ready funds.

Buying on Bad News.

Buying on Bad News.

The week's events in the stock market offer some indication of a contrary tendency to buy stocks on bad news. This is largely due to demand from an uncovered professional short interest and has not been impressive as an investment demand. The failures at Baltimore and Pittsburg have not failed, however, to arouse an uneasy feeling over the possible consequences. The growth of trust companies has been one of the most notable features of the recent era of prosperity. The enormous consolidation of capital of the last few years and the financial operations connected with them have expanded the field of operations for these institutions, even among the lines of their original operations. But bestde this their operations have been widely extended into the banking field by the increase of demand deposits, for which liberal interest is often paid, while the legal requirements upon banks for reserves do not apply to Buying on Bad News. which liberal interest is often paid, while the legal requirements upon banks for reserves do not apply to these institutions. Another field of operations for the trust companies which has been much criticised has been the promotion and exploitation of enterprises by underwriting. The tone of the discussion at the bankers' convention in San Francisco is sufficient evidence of the frank recognition of abuses in this field among bank and trust company officials themselves. The controversy between the New York claring house and the trust companies over the maintenance of trust company claring house and the trust companies over the maintenance of trust company reserves has brought the question to the public view long since. There have been episodes in New York financial affairs that have illustrated the abuse on the promotion side, including the shipbuilding case in the public eye. The Baltimore example of the consequences of over-commitments by trust companies in promotion projects, therefore, caused a keen impression in the burg of late years growing out of the consolidation process in the iron and steel industry is notorious in the financial world. The large extent to which this new wealth has gone into bank extension is also generally recognized. The terms upon which deposits may have been attracted to new banking institutions is brought forward for consideration by the failure of the Pittsburg bank, brought about by the withdrawal of deposits by small country banks which had been secured by the rate of interest allowed on deposit accounts.

Ex-United States deposits, $27,244,550: increase, $501,825.

The Financier says: The most surprising feature of the official statement of the New York associated banks last week was the almost unprecedentedly small change of only $3,000 in the cash reserve, there being a loss of this when the fact is considered that the traceable movements of mony during the week showed an estimated loss of $3,934,000 of cash. On the inter-bank movement allowed the transfer through

The routine events of the week have been favorable. The export demand for grain has been liberal and the movement of cotton to market has been much freer. Heavy currency shipments to the south have resulted, but the movement to the west seems to be restricted still with the ultimate demand from that region problematical. GOOD RESISTANCE TO DOWN-WARD MOVEMENT.

New York, Oct. 24.—Today's stock market was almost inert throughout. The appearance of the bank statement caused a sluggish recovery from early depression, but the movement of cash depression, but the movement depth movement and that for several months to come represents business already form, and estimates a probable falling off in the spring and a coming reaction.
